25 PLACES TO GET MORE
MUSIC
EXPOSURE

Next to getting sales, exposure for your songs is probably one of the most important things independent artists can get. The opportunity to reach new audiences and connect with people who connect with your music will help you to build a sustainable career. You could just have made what you feel is the greatest song ever, if nobody ever hears it, nobody will be able to share in that joy with you.

There are many places online that offer increased promotion for your music for free. Saying that, don't let the concept of free make you feel like it's an easy ride. You will need to engage with the communities and actually put some work in to build relations with new fans.

We wouldn't necessarily recommend signing up to all 25 of these resources that we have put together, unless of course you plan on spending a vast amount of time online, but you will find some really great resources here where you can upload your songs for more exposure.

Take the time to look at all the communities and sign up to two or three to start with that you think suit your style of music and offer something that you find useful.
